CENTER FOR MUSICAL AND SOUND HERITAGE

by Badih EL-HAJJ (Rvd.), Ph.D. | Dean of the Faculty of Music

The Center for Musical and Sound Heritage of the Holy Spirit University of Kaslik specializes in preserving the audio-visual musical heritage and mainly old music (recordings) and live music (traditional and popular music). It is equipped with specialized technologies to digitalize the material and preserve this heritage for future generations. The main objectives are to preserve the recorded archive with the latest technologies, record the remaining musical pieces through field research, support academic research and scientific documentation, find research topics for university students and of which our region's heritages shall benefit, in order to preserve them, and encourage students to select research topics related to our oriental region.

In order to reach these objectives, the Center aims to define research topics based upon recordings linked to a rich heritage (spanning more than 100 years and musicians (composers, singers and instrumentalists) who enriched and developed the musical traditions of the Levantine region, and to make these topics available for the Faculty of Music students at USEK. Moreover, the center aims to enrich the current musical collection by acquiring more audio-recorded material and classify it scientifically according to the modern technologies. Finally, we also aim to select researchers and research teams and support them with their research and studies, organize conferences, seminars and lectures to highlight the authors and composers of these recordings, and organize musical performances and concerts.
