

Written by Charbel Sfeir, UMC's Lead Executive

Initiation to MUN!

Views are my own - Charbel Sfeir

The Model United Nations or MUN for short might be usually interpreted as a simulation of United Nations procedures performed by students who learn the proper way to lead this process. But in reality, it's much more than this. It's a community, more like a family full of like-minded intellectuals who share a common interest of becoming future leaders. Whether in high school or university, the MUN experience has granted its participants a unique opportunity to meet fellow delegates who possess similar interests and ambitions, tour the world, and acquire an endless knowledge accompanied with valuable life and social skills.

On a more technical side, delegates will have to go through several training sessions that will not only explain the whole rules of procedures, but also help delegates excel in writing, public speaking, and research, to name a few. This exceptional opportunity will help the latter stand out in their community whether academically, socially, or even at the workplace.

All the above will be translated into something bigger, since the MUN experience is guaranteed to grant its holder a spot in several workplaces, not to mention many connections that will help with the whole process.

On an ending note, the MUN experience is indeed a remarkable one that could lead any individual into truly becoming a future leader, therefore it is more than recommended to seize this opportunity whenever it arises.